INTRODUCTION

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)—formerly known as the Food Stamp Program—is the largest nutrition assistance program in the United States and is the cornerstone of the nation’s anti-hunger efforts. SNAP benefits are funded by the United States Department of Agriculture’s Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) and issued by individual states. SNAP benefits are redeemable at any authorized FNS SNAP retailer, including a growing number of farmers markets.

By accepting SNAP, farmers markets improve access to healthy food in communities that are underserved by retail grocers (often called “food deserts”). Incentive programs at farmers markets can also help SNAP benefits stretch further. A common example is the “Double Dollars” program, which matches every SNAP dollar spent at the market (up to a certain maximum amount).

Many SNAP recipients, however, are not aware of the existence of farmers markets in their communities, or that the markets accept SNAP Electronic Benefits Transfer (EBT) cards. This guide was developed as a resource for SNAP recipients and anti-hunger organizations to identify farmers markets and SNAP incentive programs in their communities and to facilitate the use of SNAP benefits. Each farmers market listed in this guide has been authorized by FNS to accept SNAP benefits. The full list of EBT-authorized farmers markets nationwide can be found on FNS’s SNAP and Farmers’ Markets webpage.
